ABOUT LORI

Lori is a figurative sculptor whose work explores the quiet, intimate moments of connection between individuals—those subtle exchanges that reveal a shared inner life. Over the past six years, she has created compositions that bring together figures from different faith traditions, imagining encounters rooted in empathy and common humanity. In Manna from Heaven, for example, the mother of Buddha nurses the infant Moses, offering a powerful vision of spiritual interconnectedness.

Her current work integrates a classical approach to the human figure while deepening her investigation into the nature of human connection.

Lori's studio is based at The Art League of Long Island, where she founded the New York Figurative Art Atelier. There, she teaches figurative sculpture, sharing the knowledge and discipline she developed during her studies at the Florence Academy of Art.

Her artistic practice has long been driven by a commitment to social change, expressed through a wide range of media over the years. Her work has included mobile and site-specific installations, soft sculpture, plexiglass, as well as painting and drawing.
